

[the sharing game]

how and what would you share on a daily basis? a game created to explore sharing potentials with your flat-mates, friends, neighbors and beyond!

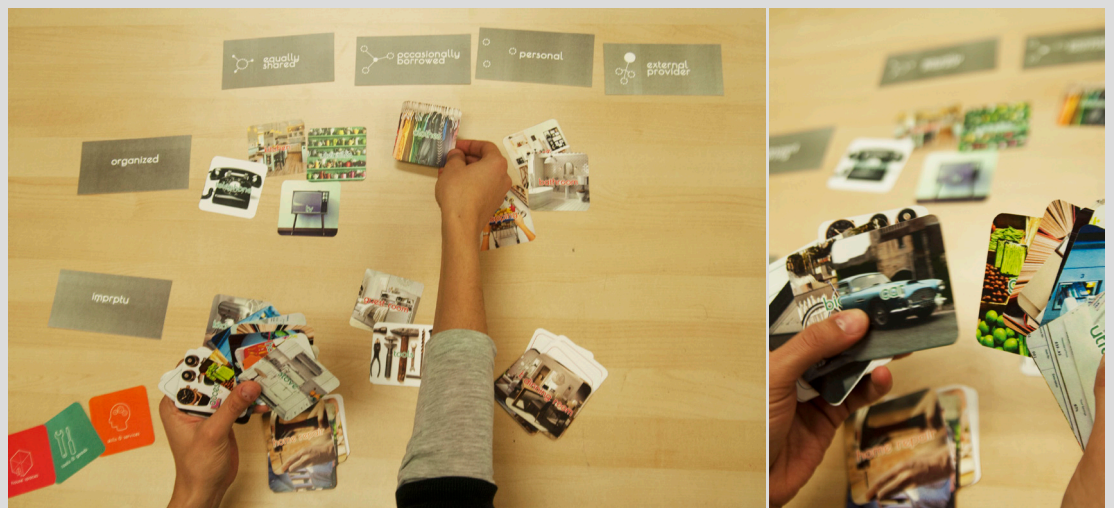

created by Eleni Katrini as part of her PhD research at Carnegie Mellon University, 'Creating the Everyday Commons; Spatial Patterns of Sharing Culture'

purpose how and what would you share on a daily basis? this game was created to help you explore sharing potentials with your flat-mates, friends, neighbors and beyond!

play to play just print the cards at A4 paper size and cut them. the purpose of the game is to help you go through a discursive process with your fellow humans and uncover the potentials and the limits of sharing personal and common resources.

there are two kinds of cards: the deck with the shareables (things that could be shared) and the cards with conditions of sharing (grey cards). The shareable cards help you identify what you would be willing to share and expand in three categories: 'tools & goods', 'spaces' and 'services & skills'. After you have selected the things that you would be willing to share, you can use the 'conditions' cards to sort them under the conditions you are willing to share them.

The game could also evolve to ideation for co-production of things, spaces and activities that do not exist yet. The open-ended shareable cards allow you to contribute more ideas and expand on the available options! Just sort the cards based on what you be willing to share and how and let the game begin!
